Our Guest Speaker of March 15, Marshall Iliff from the Annapolis Bird Club enlightened the club with his many slides of birds. He devoted his talk mostly to birds that we don't usually see or notice in our daily lives. With his extensive travels, many birds were discussed and ideas given on how to photograph them pointing out some birds that are skittish while others do not seem to fear people. All his photographs were hand-held using a 400mm lens with a doubler added at times. All his photos were taken in the wild. His camera choice, Nikon.
